FORK'S HOTEL,
GEORGE W. MAUGER, Proprietor.
The above well-known hotel has recently undergone radical changes in its internal arrangements, and its proprietor announces to his former custom and the travelling public that his accomodations for the comfort of his guests are second to none in the country. His table will always be found supplied, not only with substantial food, but with all the delicacies of the season. His wines and liquors (except that popular beverage known as "Mellora"), purchased direct from the importing houses, are entirely pure, and free from all poisonous drugs. He is thankful for a liberal patronage in the past, and will continue to deserve it in the future.

Miscellaneous.

MIGGLES.

[From the California Overland Monthly.]

We were eight, including the driver. We had not spoken during the passage of the last six miles, since the jolting of the heavy vehicle over the roughening road had spoiled the Judge's last poetical quotation. The tall man beside the Judge was asleep his arm passed through the swaying strap and his head resting upon it—altogether a limp, helpless looking object, as if he had hanged himself and been cut down too late. The French lady on the back seat was asleep, too, yet in a half conscious propriety of attitude shown even in the disposition of the handkerchief which she held to her forehead, and which partially veiled her face. The lady from Virginia City, traveling with her husband, had long since lost all individuality, in a wild confusion of ribbons, veils, furs and shawls. There was no sound but the rattling of wheels and the dash of rain upon the roof. Suddenly the stage stopped, and we became dimly aware of voices. The driver was evidently in the midst of an exciting colloquy, with some one in the road—a colloquy, of which such fragments as "bridge gone," "twenty feet of water," "can't pass," were occasionally distinguished above the storm. Then came a lull, the mysterious voice from the road shouted the parting adjuration:

"Try Miggles."

We caught sight of our leaders as the vehicle slowly turned, of a horseman vanishing through the rain, and we were evidently on our way to "Miggles."

Who and where was Miggles? The Judge, our authority, did not remember the name, and he knew the country thoroughly. The Washoe traveler thought Miggles must keep a hotel. We only knew that we were stopped by high water in front and rear, and, that Miggles was our rock of refuge. A ten minute splashing through a tangled byroad, scarcely wide enough for the stage, and we drew up before a barred and boarded gate in a wide stonewall or fence about eight feet high. Evidently Miggles,' and evidently Miggles did not keep a hotel.

The driver got down and tried the gate, It was securely locked.

"Miggles! O Miggles!"

No answer.

"Miggles! You Miggles!" continued the driver, with rising wrath.

"Miggles!" joined in the expressman, persuasively. "O Miggy! Mig!"

But no reply came from the apparently insensate Miggles. The Judge, who had finally got the window down, put his head out and propounded a series of questions, which, if answered categorically, would have undoubtedly elucidated the whole mystery, but which the driver evaded by replying that "if we didn't want to sit in the coach all night, we had better rise up and sing out for Miggles."

So we rose up and called on Miggles in chorus. Then separately. And when we had finished, a Hibernian fellow passenger from the roof called for "Maygells!" whereat we all laughed. While we were laughing, the driver cried "Shoo!"

We listened. To our infinite amazement, the chorus of "Miggles" was repeated from the other side of the wall, even to the final and supplemental "Maygells."

"Extraordinary echo," said the Judge.

"Extraordinary d—d skunk!" roared the driver contemptuously. "Come out of that, Miggles, and show yourself! Be a man, Miggles! Don't hide in the dark; I wouldn't if I were you, Miggles," continued Yuba Bill, now dancing about in an excess of fury.

"Miggles!" continued the voice, "O Miggles!"

"My good man, Mr. Myghail!" said the Judge, softening the asperities of the name as much as possible, "consider the inhospitality of refusing shelter from the inclemency of the weather to helpless females. Really, my dear sir——" but a succession of "Miggles," ending in a burst of laughter drowned his voice.

Yuba Bill hesitated no longer. Taking a heavy stone from the road, he battered down the gate, and with the expressman entered the enclosure. We followed. Nobody was to be seen. In the gathering darkness all that we could distinguish was that we were in a garden—from the rose bushes that scattered over us a minute spray from their dripping leaves—and before a long, rambling wooden building.

"Do you know this Miggles?" asked the Judge of Yuba Bill.

"No, nor don't want to," said Bill shortly, who felt the Pioneer Stage Company insulted in his person by the contumacious Miggles.

"But, my dear sir," expostulated the Judge, as he thought of the barred gate.

"Lookee here," said Yuba Bill, with irony, "hadn't you better go back and sit in the coach till yer introduced? I'm going in,' and he pushed open the door of the building.

A long room, lighted only by the embers of a fire that was dying on the large hearth at its furthest extremity. The walls curiously papered, and the flickering fire light bringing out its grotesque pattern. Somebody sitting in a large arm-chair by the fire place. All this we saw as we crowded together into the room after the driver and expressman.

The figure neither spoke nor stirred. Yuba Bill walked wrathfully toward it, and turned the eye of his coach lantern upon its face. It was a man's face prematurely old and wrinkled, with very large eyes, in which there was that expression of perfectly gratuitous solemnity which I had sometimes seen in an owl's. The large eyes wandered from Bill's face to the lantern, and finally fixed their gaze on that luminous object without further recognition.

Bill restrained himself with an effort.

"Miggles! Be you deaf? You ain't dumb, anyhow, you know;" and Yuba Bill shook the insensate figure by the shoulder.

To our great dismay, as Bill removed his hand, the venerable stranger apparently collapsed—sinking into half his size and an indistinguishable heap of clothing.

"Well, dern my skin," said Bill, looking appealingly at us, and hopelessly retiring from the contest.

The Judge now stepped forward, and we lifted the mysterious invertebrate back into his original position. Bill was dismissed with the lantern to reconnoiter outside, for it was evident from the helplessness of this solitary man there must be attendants near at hand, and we all drew near the fire. The Judge, who had regained his authority and had never lost his conversational amiability—standing before us with his back to the hearth—charged us, an imaginary jury, as follows:

"It is evident that either our distinguished friend here has reached that condition described by Shakspeare as 'the sere and yellow leaf,' or has sufferred some premature abatement of his mental and physical faculties. Whether he is really the Miggles—"

Here he was interrupted by "Miggles! Miggles! O Miggles! Mig!" and in fact the whole chorus of Miggles in very much the same key as it had once been delivered unto us.

We gazed at each other for a moment in some alarm. The Judge, in particular, vacated his position quickly, as the voice seemed to come directly over his shoulder. The cause, however, was soon discovered in a large magpie who was perched upon a shelf over the fireplace, and who immediate relapsed into sepulchral silence, which contrasted singularly with his previous volubility. It was undoubtedly his voice which we heard in the road, and our friend in the chair was not responsible for the discourtesy. Yuba Bill, who re-entered the room after an unsuccessful search, was loth to accept the explanation, and still eyed the helpless sitter with suspicion. He had found a shed in which he had put up his horses—but he came back dripping and skeptical. "Thar ain't nobody but him within ten miles of the shanty, and that 'ar d—d old skeesicks knows it."

But the faith of the majority proved to be securely based. Bill had scarcely ceased growling before we heard a quick step on the porch, the trailing of a wet skirt, the door was flung open, and with a flash of white teeth, a sparkle of dark eyes, and an utter absence of ceremony or diffidence, a young woman entered, shut the door, and panting, leaned back against it.

"O, if you please, I'm Miggles!"

And this was Miggles! This bright eyed, full throated young woman, whose wet gown of coarse blue stuff could not hide the beauty of the feminine curves to which it clung; from the chestnut crown of whose head—topped by a man's oilskin sou'wester—to the little feet and ankles—hidded far away somewhere in the recesses of her boy's brogans, all was grace—this was Miggles, laughing at us, too, in the most airy, frank, offhand manner imaginable.

"You see boys," said she—quite out of breath, and holding one little hand against her side, quite unheeding the speechless discomfiture of Yuba Bill, whose features had relaxed into an expression of gratuitous and imbecile cheerfulness; "You see, boys, I was mor'n two miles away when you passed down the road. I thought you might pull up here, and so I run the whole way, knowing nobody was home but him—and—I'm out of breath—and—that lets me out."

And here Miggles caught her drooping oilskin hat from her head, with a michievous swirl that scattered a shower of rain drops over us; attempted to put back her hair; dropped two hairpins in the attempt; laughed and sat down beside Yuba Bill, with her hands crossed lightly on her lap.

The Judge recovered himself first, and essayed an extravagant compliment

"I'll trouble you for that har pin," said Miggles, gravely. Half a dozen hands were stretched forward; the missing hairpin was restored to its fair owner; and Miggles, crossing the room, looked keenly in the face of the invalid. The solemn eyes looked back at hers, with an expression we had never seen before. Life and intelligence seemed to struggle back into the rugged face. Miggles laughed again—it was a singularly eloquent laugh—and turned her black eyes and white teeth once more towards us.

"This afflicted person is"—hesitated the Judge.

"Jim," said Miggles.

"Your father?"

"No.'

"Brother?"

"No."

"Husband?"

Miggles darted a quick, half-defiant glance at the two lady passengers who I had noticed did not participate in the general masculine admiration of Miggles, and said gravely: "No—its Jim."

There was an awkward pause. The lady passengers moved closer to each other. The Washoe husband looked abstractedly at the fire; and the tall man apparently turned himself inward for self support at this emergency. But Miggles' laugh, which was very infectious, broke the silence. 'Come,' she said briskly, 'you must be hungry. Who'll bear a hand to help me get tea?"

She had no lack of volunteers. In a few moments Yuba Bill was engaged, like Caliban, in bearing logs for this Miranda; the expressman was grinding coffee on the veranda; to myself the arduous duty of slicing bacon was assigned; and the Judge lent each man his good humored and voluble counsel. And when Miggles, assisted by the Judge and our Hibernian 'deck passenger,' set the table with all the available crockery, we had become quite joyous, in spite of the rain that beat against the windows, the wind that whirled down the chimney, the two ladies who whispered in the corner, or the magpie who uttered a satirical and croaking commentary on their conversation, from his perch above. In the now bright, blazing fire we could see that the walls were papered with illustrated journals, arranged with feminine taste and discrimination. The furniture was extemporized, and adapted from candle boxes and packing cases, and covered with gay calico or the skin of some animal. The arm-chair of the helpless Jim was an ingenious variation of a flour barrel. There was neatness and even a taste for the picturesque to be seen in the few details of the long low room.

The meal was a culinary success. But more, it was a social triumph—chiefly, I think, owing to the rare tact of Miggles in guiding the conversation, asking all the questions herself, yet bearing throughout a frankness that rejected the idea of any concealment on her part. So that we talked of ourselves, of our prospects, of the journey, of the weather, of each other—of everything but our host and hostess. It must be confessed that Miggles' conversation was never elegant, rarely grammatical, and that at times she used expletives, the use of which are generally yielded to our sex. But they were delivered with such a lightening up of teeth and eyes, and were usually followed by a laugh—a laugh peculiar to Miggles—so frank and honest that it seemed to clear the moral atmosphere.

Once during the meal, we heard a a noise like the rubbing of a heavy body against the outer walls of the house. This was soon followed by a scratch and sniffling at the door. 'That's Joaquin,' said Miggles, in reply to our questioning glances; 'would you like to see him?' Before we could answer, she had opened the door, and disclosed a half—grown grizzly, who instantly raised himself on his haunches, with his forepaws hanging down in the popular attitude of mendicancy, and looked admiringly at Miggles, with a singular resemblance in his manner to Yuba Bill. 'That's my watch dog,' said Miggles, in explanation. 'O, he don't bite,' she added, as the two lady passengers fluttered into a corner, 'Does he, old Toppy!—(the latter remark being addressed directly to the sagacious Joaquin.) 'I tell you what boys,' continued Miggles, after she had fed and closed the door on Ursa Minor, 'you were in big luck that Joaquin wasn't hanging round when you dropped in to-night."

"Where was he?" asked the Judge.

"With me," said Miggles. 'Lord love you, he trots round with me at night like as if he was a man.'

We were silent for a few moments, and listened to the wind. Perhaps we all had the same picture before us—of Miggles walking through the rainy woods with her savage guardian at her side. The Judge, I remember, said something about Una and her lion; but Miggles received it as she did other compliments, with quiet gravity.—Whether she was altogether unconscious of the admiration she excited—she could hardly have been oblivious of Yuba Bill's adoration—I knew not; but her very frankness suggested a perfect sexual equality that was cruelly humiliating to the younger members of our party.

The incident of the bear did not add anything in Miggles favor in the opinion of those of her own sex who were present. In fact, the repast over, a chilliness radiated from the two lady passengers that no pine boughs brought in by Yuba Bill and cast as a sacrifice upon the hearth could wholly overcome. Miggles felt it; and suddenly declaring that it was time to 'turn in,' offered to show the ladies to their bed in an adjoining room. 'You boys will have to camp out here by the fire as well as you can,' she added, 'for thar ain't but the one room.'

Our sex—by which, my dear sir, I allude to the stronger portion of humanity—has been generally relieved from the imputation of curiosity, or a fondness for gossip. Yet I am constrained to say that hardly was the door closed on Miggles than we crowded together, whispering, snickering, smiling and exchanging snspicions, surmises, and a thousand speculations in regard to our pretty hostess and her singular companion. I fear that we even hustled that imbecile paralytic, who sat like a voiceless Memnon in our midst, gazing with the serene indifference of the past in his passionless eyes, upon our wordy council. In the midst of an exciting discussion the door opened again, and Miggles re-entered.

But not, apparently, the same Miggles who a few hours before had flashed upon us. Her eyes were downcast, and as she hesitated for a moment on the threshold with a blanket on her arm, seemed to have left behind her the frank fearlessness which had charmed us a moment before. Coming into the room, she drew a low stool beside the paralytic's chair, sat down, drew the blanket over her shoulders, and saying, 'If it's all the same to you, boys, as we're rather crowded, I'll stop here to-night,' took the invalid's withered hand in her own, and turned her eyes upon the dying fire. An instinctive feeling that this was only premonitory to more confidential relations, and perhaps some shame at our previous curiosity, kept us silent. The rain still beat upon the roof; wandering gusts of wind stirred the embers into momentary brightness, until, in a lull of the elements, Miggles suddenly lifted up her head, and throwing her hair over her shoulder, turned her face upon the group and asked:

'Is there any one of you that knows me?'

There was no reply.

'Think again! I lived at Marysville in '53. Everybody knew me there, and everybody had a right to know me. I kept the Polka Saloon until I came to live with Jim. That's six years ago. Perhaps I've changed some.'

The absence of recognition may have disconcerted her. She turned her head to the fire again and it was some seconds before she again spoke, and more rapidly.

'Well, you see, I thought some of you must have known me. There's no great harm done, any way. What I was going to say was this: Jim here'—she took his hand in both of hers as she spoke—'used to know me, if you didn't, and spent a heap of money upon me. I reckon he spent all he had. And one day—it's six years ago this winter—Jim came into my back room, sat down on my sofy, like as you see him in that chair, and never moved again without help. He was struck all of a heap, and never seemed to know what ailed him. The doctors came, and said as how it was caused all along of his way of life—for Jim was mighty free and wild-like—and that he would never get better, and couldn't last long any way. They advised me to send him to Frisco to the hospital, for he was no good to any one, and would be a baby all his life. Perhaps it was something in Jim's eye; perhaps it was that I never had a baby, but I said 'No.' I was rich then, for I was popular with everybody—gentlemen like yourself, sir, came to see me—and I sold out my business and bought this yer place, because it was sort of out of the way of travel, you see, and I brought my baby here.'

With a woman's intuitive tact and poetry, she had as she spoke slowly shifted her position so as to bring the mute figure of the ruined man between her and her audience—hiding in the shadow behind it—as if she offered it as a tacit apology for her actions. Silent and expressionless, it yet spoke for her; helpless, crushed and smitten with the Divine thunderbolt, it stretched an invisible arm around her.

Hidden in the darkness, but still holding his hand, she went on:

"It was a long time before I could get the hang of things about yer, for I was used to company and excitement. I couldn't get any woman to help me, and a man I dursent trust; but what with the Indians hereabout, who'd do odd jobs for me, and having everything sent from the North Fork, Jim and I managed to worry through. The Doctor would run up from Sacramento once in awhile. He'd ask to see 'Miggles' baby,' as he called Jim, and when he'd go away, he'd say 'Miggles, you are a trump—God bless you;' and it didn't seem so lonely after that. But the last time he was here he said, as he opened the door to go; 'Do you know, Miggles, your baby will grow up to be a man yet and an honor to his mother? but not here, Miggles, not here! And I thought he went away sad and—and'"—and here Miggles' voice and head were somehow both lost completely in the shadow.

"The folks about here are very kind," said Miggles, after a pause, coming a little into the light again. "The men from the Fork used to hang around here until they found they wasn't wanted, and the women are kind—and don't call. I was pretty lonely until I picked up Joaquin in the wood yonder one day, when he wasn't so high, and taught him to beg for his dinner; and then thar's Polly—that's the magpie—she knows no end of tricks, and makes it quite sociable of evenings with talk, and so I don't feel like as I was the only being about the ranch. And Jim here," said Miggles, with her old laugh again, and coming out quite into the firelight. "Jim—why, boys, you would admire to see how much he knows for a man like him. Sometimes I bring him flowers, and he looks at 'em just as natural as if he knew 'em; and at times, when we're sitting here alone, I read him those things on the wall. Why, Lord!" said Miggles, with her frank laugh, "I've read him that whole side of the house this winter. There never was such a man for reading as Jim."

"Why," asked the Judge, "do you not marry this man to whom you have devoted your youthful life?"

"Well, you see," said Miggles, "it would be playing it rather low down on Jim, to take advantage of his being so helpless. And then, if we were man and wife now, we'd both know that I was bound to do what I do now of my own accord."

"But you are young yet and attractive—"

"It's getting late," said Miggles, gravely, "and you had better turn in. Good night boys;" and throwing the blanket over her head, Miggles laid herself down beside Jim's chair, her head pillowed on the low stool that held his feet, and spoke no more. The fire slow

The Columbian
—AND—
Bloomsburg Democrat.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY MORNING, AUGUST 13, 1869.

The Tennessee Victory.

Never, we believe, in the history of politics has there been such a sweeping change in popular sentiment, and such a signal triumph, as that achieved by the Democracy of Tennessee on Thursday of last week.

Less than a year ago Grant received a majority of 30,447; now Senter's is in the neighborhood of 50,000 showing a gain of 80,000. This result has been achieved through the divisions of the Republican party. Senter and Stokes were both original rebels, and both were "reconstructed." Neither were regularly nominated for Governor, but the Democrats resolved to support Senter because he was in favor of enfranchising the white voters of the State, while Stokes favored the old system of proscription. Under the present arrangement, says the Lancaster Intelligencer.

"Less than half the people of the State were voters. Those who were enfranchised numbered about 95,000, while not less than 110,000 white men were disfranchised. Of the enfranchised citizens 60,000 were white men and 35,000 negroes. Of the 60,000 whites about 35,000 were Conservative Union men.—The Radical whites and negroes numbered 60,000, and they had a reliable majority of not less than 25,000."

As a matter of course the present proscriptive features of the Constitution will be repealed, and we can count on a reliable majority hereafter of 85,000.

Not the least important part of the victory is the fact that the Democrats have a two-thirds majority in the Legislature, which will enable them to send a Democrat to the U. S. Senate in place of Fowler. We hope and believe it will be Andrew Johnson. To place the impeached by the side of the impeachers would be "swinging around the circle" to some purpose. Being a man of large public experience, of undoubted ability and courage, he would at once assume a leadership of the Southern men in that body, and exercise an important influence in the legislation of the country.

Lastly, under no circumstances can this be claimed as a Radical victory. Even the Press concedes it to us. The N. Y. Times said, August 2nd,"

"Governor Senter's election is certain by a majority which depends entirely upon the fidelity with which the registrars have discharged the duty confided to them. Nominated originally by a few Republicans, nearly all of whom abandoned him the moment he gave proof of the betrayal planned and negotiated by his friends, he is to-day the candidate of the Democracy, and his election will be secured through their votes. To claim that he is a Republican candidate is the sheerest nonsense. His Republican votes can easily be counted on thumbs and fingers. Every day the dividing line becomes plainer and plainer. Having secured his election through Democratic votes, his Administration will necessarily be Democratic.

Cresswell and Boutwell, the two prominent members of Grant's Cabinet, and the two wielding the most patronage, formally declared in favor of Stokes, and stated that they represented the views of Grant.

And now, Democrats of Pennsylvania, having seen what your brethren in Virginia, Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee and Montana have done, arouse yourselves and prepare for action. It is no time to talk about private disappointments and petty grievances. The great popular heart is beating in favor of Packer and Pershing. Let us bury old grievances in the grave of the past, and by one strong, united effort hurl from power the men who have misgoverned Pennsylvania, and made her name a reproach in the Republic.

Democratic Victories.

Besides the sweeping triumphs in Kentucky and Tennessee the Democrats have carried two out of the six members of Congress in Alabama. Before the entire delegation was Radical.

In Montana Hon. J. M. Cavanaugh, Democrat, is re-elected Delegate to Congress from that Territory by 2,000 majority.

His majority two years ago was 1,100. We confidently exect to carry Mississippi and Texas, even if Grant throws the whole weight of his administration against us.

NOTWITHSTANDING the sneers of the Republican, the Democratic party will support the ticket nominated last week, and will give it the usual majority. There is always more or less rivalry previous to a convention, and frequently much bitterness; but no principle is better settled than the one that "the majority must rule." The charge of "ring" is puerile. The candidates nominated were the choice of a convention in which every township was represented, and where each had an equal voice. The defeated candidates themselves do not charge either bribery, or the use of undue influence, and for the Republican to assume to be their spokesman is a transparent trick often resorted to by dishonest men to create a division in our party. We want neither sympathy nor counsel from such a source. The Democratic party of Columbia county is as competent now to manage its own affairs as it ever was; and if in need of assistance would not call upon a leader who has proven himself unfit to hold his own party together.

Previous to the nominations the COLUMBIAN held an even balance between the candidates; now we are for the ticket. Any person who advocates an independent one is not a true Democrat, but desires to play into the hands of our enemies. "In unity there is strength;" by union our party has attained its present power in this county, which can only be lost by turning a willing ear to the plaints of disappointed politicians.

AT Charleston, Virginia, the offices are thus bestowed. Joseph A. Chapline, Judge of the Circuit Court; Wm. A. Chapline, Clerk of the Circuit Court; I. Thomas Chapline, Deputy Sheriff; Isaac Chapline, Sr., Assessor; Little Josie Chapline Clerk in Post-office. A cross with the Washburne family would make a team hard to beat in the office getting and holding line.

FOR THE COLUMBIAN.

A Reminiscence.

William Henry Bradley, the mouthpiece of the Stockholders of the Republican, is fully entitled to claim in a small way what we understand has been the great ambition of his life—notoriety. Whether he is in any way related to the still more notorious Alpeoria we are not informed, but his appearance would not much belie the suspicion. He came to this town a dull, uncomely lad, and after getting here and elsewhere what little knowledge his capacity was equal to, he attempted to master the profound science and practice of medicine. He became a loyalist and inflicted his blundering and bungling upon the poor soldiers of our army, doing business there and elsewhere, upon the motto of the highwayman, that "dead men tell no tales."

Like Othello, when the war ceased, he found his occupation gone, and he retired to the wilds of Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, where several little bills still attest the amount of his credit, and various autographs of the "fisicker" are shown by the inhabitants. Managing to get across the line, he found himself in Bloomsburg, where with a great flourish of trumpets he gave himself to the public, as "Late Assistant Medical Director of the United States Army:" and to prove his expertness in his profession he worked for an hour or two to extract a bullet from the hand of one of our citizens; and after giving it up in despair, it was taken out in about a minute, by a gentleman who for years has been an ornament to his profession. That was about his only patient, and it played him out. He wilted from thenceforth, and the late Army Surgeon was the joke and butt of all the boys in town.

If our learning is not at fault, it was a celebrated Greek writer, who relates, that upon occasion, the Gods granted to a poor suffering mortal an advantage in choosing a physician, over that granted to mankind in general; by enabling him to see the ghosts of those who had been despatched by the then medical directors. Going from one disciple of Esculapius to anther, the patient was shocked to find innumerable ghosts crowding the entrance and blocking up the very street; but continuing his search, he came at last to one, where but a single, solitary ghost stood sentinel at the doorway. The poor sufferer highly elated entered the house, stated his case, received the prescription and paid the fee; but before taking his leave, congratulated the Doctor upon the fact, that whereas other physicians had crowds of ghosts besieging their doors, he had but one. Alas! alas! replied the poor fellow—"He was the only patient I ever had."

He then tried to sell his medical practice, but not having a single ghost, he had nothing to dispose of, and found no purchaser. About that time the increasing debility and impending dissolution of the Radical party in Columbia county, which had been under treatment on the Thompsonian system for some years, became so very imminent, that a change in the medication was absolutely demanded. The change was made, and if William Henry Bradley continues much longer his present course, he will have at least one ghost dogging his steps, and gazing with vacant, ghostly eye upon his opening door.

The Way to Increase Our Strength.

That sound and spirited newspaper, the Erie Observer, says:

We are not disposed to underestimate the value of public speaking in a political canvass yet we think it unsafe and unwise to rely exclusively, or even mainly, upon it. The most effective worker in a campaign is a good newspaper. This is especially true of the present year, when the strongest arguments that can possibly be made in favor of the Democracy is a faithful record of current history. We doubt if any thinking man who is not selfishly interested in the success of the Rupublican party, can read a fair statement of events as they transpire, from day to-day, or from week to week, and refuse to give in his adhesion to the principles and policy of the Democratic party. It therefore becomes the duty, as it should be the pleasure, of every good Democrat to assist in the circulation of a good Democratic newspaper and to see to it that his friends and neighbors, of whatever political faith, are supplied with one. This is not only the best, but the cheapest way to secure success. Twenty dollars extended in this way will do more service to the cause than two hundred spent on public meetings. Let all of our party friends see to it that a sound paper is placed in the hands of every person of their acquaintance who will read it.

We can endorse every word of the above. Conversions are not made on the eve of an election, although the ablest speakers may be employed. It is by continued appeals to the reason that men are convinced.

We offer the COLUMBIAN for the campaign for the cheap sum of Twenty-five cents. This places it within the reach of every one, and enables such of our readers as desire to aid in the spread of our principles to do so at a small expense. See to it that not only every Democrat, but that every Republican voter is supplied with a copy until the close of the campaign.

Miscellaneous Dispatches.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 11.—The members of the Democratic State Central Committee met here to-day to devise means to fill the vacancy caused by the declination of Gen. Rosecrans as candidate for Governor of Ohio, and have unanimously nominated George H. Pendleton, who has accepted.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Aug. 11.—The annual Democratic convention of Luzerne assembled in the Court House yesterday and placed the following ticket in nomination: Assembly, D. L. O'Neill S. W. Keene, and N. S. Westler; county Treasurer, James Campbell; Recorder, Thomas Hutchins; Register, Chas. C. Plotz; Commissioner, S. W. Bailey; Auditor, A. M. Renshaw; Coroner, Dr. J. W. O'Malley.

NASHVILLE, August 11.—Senter's majority is 62,000, with 19 counties to hear from. The State Senate, composed of 25 members, stand 21 conservatives to 4 conservative republicans. The House of Representatives, composed of 84 members, stands 67 conservatives, 9 radicals and 6 conservative republicans, with two districts to hear from.

THE TRIALS.

THE WITNESS NATHAN J. HESS.—Of all the witnesses examined for the Prosecution whose testimony was relevant and important, this one perhaps is least liable to criticism or censure. It is true that we can detect a few inaccurate statements made by him, and we are at liberty to suppose that his intelligence was not of a high order, but he does not seem to have been actuated by any malicious or base motive or to have been raised by unworthy passions. He was examined as a witness in all the trials of which we have records before us—those of Rantz, Colley and M'Henry—and mainly in regard to the Rantz meeting of Aug. 14th 1861. When we come to treat of that meeting as a distinct subject of investigation, the testimony of Hess will become most valuable and will be freely used. It will exhibit (indirectly at least) the cause of that meeting as alleged in defence upon the trials, and also the circumstances under which it assembled. Unfortunately the witness was not present at the meeting in the afternoon. He says, he went to it "about 10 o'clock and staid until 12. The meeting had adjourned to go to dinner when I left, I did not return after dinner." We have not therefore, the advantage of his testimony as a check upon other statements of what took place and was said in the afternoon, but as far as it goes it has its value and will be made available for our purpose of ascertaining and exposing the whole truth in regard to the Rantz meeting.

In the Colley trial, Hess testified to a remark by the Defendant about a future fair election and spilling of blood if it should not be had, almost identical in terms with that testified to by Richard Stiles upon which we have already commented.

In the Rantz trial Hess was examined as to his knowledge of a secret meeting at the house of Peter Case, but nothing important was elicited. He was not, therefore, examined upon that point in the susequent cases. We only refer to his testimony concerning that meeting for the purpose of saying that the witness was in error regarding its date. He fixed it, "about a year ago," which would be in October 1863, whereas it was in fact held many months before that date as was fully shown by other testimony. Hess says there were no speeches made at the Case meeting; that he was not initiated as a member of the Club or association, and that he did not know its object. He had heard the meetings called "knights of the Golden Circle," (but does not say when or by whom;) "don't know if that was the name or not."

Hess had served in the war but returned home 5th August 1864. Afterwards and at the time of the trials he was, as he says, in no regular employment. His invited presence at the meetings above mentioned is in itself, some evidence that they were innocent in character. This witness died last spring of lung disease. It is believed he was induced to become a government witness in order to save his father from a threatened arrest. Every effort and influence possible were used in the days of the Invasion to make up evidence against our citizens. It was sought with avidity and used without scruple. It was invited from all quarters and sometimes extorted or subsidized. Fear, interest, family affection and party passion were each appealed to for the false, perverted or irrelevant testimony which should consign innocent men to dungeons and gloss over and conceal the iniquity of their arrest and punishment. That Nathan J. Hess did not swear more strongly and unfairly under the pressure of power, was due to his own scruples of honor or of conscience and not at all to any sense of justice or of moral obligation in those who employed him.

THE WITNESS SILAS KARNS:—Another government witness appears upon the scene under circumstances of a very peculiar character and full of instruction. He came into view in the M'Henry case for the first time, and fresh from the manipulation of the military authorities to whose jurisdiction he was amenable. For he was a non-reporting drafted man who had made terms with power and was transformed from a criminal to a witness, from being an object of vengeance to occupy a position of tolerance and favor. The witness was Silas Karns (who is supposed to have been concerned in the shooting affray in which Lieut. Robison was wounded) and he was produced under instructions and conditions well calculated to spur his zeal in behalf of the prosecution. A world of meaning is contained in the following language obtained from his cross-examination in the M'Henry trial:

"I am drafted in first three year's draft—in fall of 1863. Capt. Silver said, if I came here and testified I should be released—and tell all I know about this case, and Rutan's case, and the shooting of Robison."

Of course Capt. Silver acted under instructions and is not primarily responsible for this arrangement and for the manipulation of the witness, who, being within the grasp of power, was compelled to make the best terms he could. The military authorities at Harrisburg and the Radical politicians who instigated them, are the parties to be held responsible for all that was done in and about the trials including the preparation of testimony. And what did they do in the case before us? Discharged Karns from all responsibility and took him into favor upon the express condition that he would tell them about the shooting affair and swear against Daniel M'Henry and Mr. Rutan. The latter objects were of course the main ones. The Robison homicide was quite a secondary matter—it involved only the question of a life lost by violence—but the conviction of M'Henry and Rutan was an important and darling object and to be accomplished by the use of all possible means. It was "a political necessity" that they should be convicted and punished, for they had been contumacious to power and their acquittal would openly condemn their persecutors before the people.

Observe the temptation held out to the witness—exemption from army service; exemption from all punishment for desertion (or not reporting for a whole year;) immunity, for all possible participation in the homicide affray, and finally employment and compensation as a witness. The road in one direction was made smooth and inviting, while an opposite course pointed to prison and bonds—to poverty, disgrace and punishment.

It must appear very remarkable to good unsophisticated people who supposed the Invasion had legitimate objects, that deserters were not pursued with vigor and those concerned in shooting Robison sought out and punished. Although the county was occupied by an army for months at an expense of hundreds of thousands of dollars, very little was done by it to accomplish the first of these objects and (so far as the public know) nothing to accomplish the last. It is true that deserters (non-reporting men) were not numerous here, and that a few of them left the county; but of those accessible scarcely any were arrested by the troops. Those reclaimed or secured to the public service were almost exclusively reclaimed or secured through the regular agency of the Deputy Provost Marshal, either by voluntary reporting to him or (in a few cases) by arrest under his authority. The army expended its attention upon innocent citizens and watched the elections, but mostly lounged away its time in inglorious but expensive idleness. We have seen too that when so-called deserters were arrested the main object was to make them witnesses against the citizen prisoners instead of securing them to the public service or punishing them for their dereliction of duty.

Karns was examined as a witness on the 15th of December 1864. As his testimony related entirely to the Rantz meeting we shall reserve it until we enter upon the subject of that meeting. We will here only add (in view of our present remarks upon his position as a witness) that his evidence was not very objectionable nor injurious to the defense. In fact we shall rely upon parts of it in our exposition of the Rantz meeting as a valuable contribution to the cause of truth and justice.

Commencement at Lewisburg.

The University at Lewisburg has just held its annual Commencement. It was largely attended. On Sabbath afternoon July 25th Rev. L. D. B. Pepper D.D. of Upland preached the sermon before the Society for Moral and Religious Inquiry. In the evening Rev. B.F. Woodburn of Westmoreland preached the sermon before the Pa. Bap. Education Society.

The Alumni Association met on Tuesday evening C. B. Ripley Esq., of New York class of 1864 delivered the oration on "The relation of the Alumni to their Alma Mater."

A poem on "Culture" was read by Rev. T. E. Clapp of Hollidaysburg class of 1861. A tablet placed in Commencement Hall in memory of the Alumni who fell in the late war was dedicated the same evening. Major Thomas Chamberlin of Lewisburg class of 1858, read the dedicatory poem. On the tablet were the following inscriptions.

Thomas Rishel Orwig, A. B. Class of 1862, 4th Sergt. Co. E. 142 P. V. died in Hospital Nov. 30th 1862, aged 22 years.

Andrew Gregg Tucker A. B. Class 1862. 1st Lieut. Co. E. 142 P. V. wounded at Gettysburg July 1st died July 5th 1863, aged 19 years.

Milton Opp A. M. Class 1858, Lieut. Col. 84 Regt. P. V. wounded at the Wilderness May 6th, died May 9th 1864 aged 24 years.

James Potter Gregg S. B. M. D. Class 1855, Capt. Co. D. 45th Regt. P. V. killed at Petersburg Sept. 30th 1864, aged 30 years.

Wednesday afternoon the graduating exercises of the University Female Institute were held, fifteen young ladies read Essays which evinced very careful preparation. The Institute is separate from the College although under the same Board of Trustees. The building having become too small to accommodate the increasing number of students, a new wing has just been erected.

Wednesday evening was the anniversary of the Literary Societies. Theodore Tilton Esq., Editor of the N. Y. Independant delivered the oration on "The Art of using the mind" It was humorous, entertaining and instructive. Those present will not soon forget it.

Rev. D. H. Miller, D. D. of Elizabeth, N. J. read a poem on "Love" which was also a masterly pro inction.

Thursday, July 29th was the great day of the week.

The procession composed of the Faculty, Trustees, Curators, students, Alumni and many others preceded by the Selinsgrove Brass Band left the Court House at 9 o'clock for Commencement Hall.

The Hall was densly crowded Fifteen young men graduated as follows:

Salutatory—Martin Bill, Jr., Alleghany city. By mind we conquer—J. W. Crawford, Montoursville. The True Reform—Wm. H. Shermer, Philadelphia. Limits of Knowledge—Chas. H. Anderson, West Haverford. Triumphs of Perseverance—D. J. Sturdevant, Laceyville. Life a Mystery—Francis M. Baker, Boalsburg. Hugh Miller—Edmund Wells, Pottstown. Decline of Nations—Albert Schooly, Slifer. The Vedes—George J. The Masters Oration on "Literary Perpetuities" was delivered by Rev. John L. Hutsan of Stockton, N. J. class of 1866. The Commencement dinner prepared by the ladies of the Lewisburg Baptist Church was then partaken of by a large number of the friends of the Institution. Jovial speeches were made which added very much to the enjoyment of the occasion. The Levee of President Loomis was largely attended in the evening.

The University is already exerting a very great influence. May it long continue not only to be a blessing to Central Pennsylvania but the whole of the old Keystone State. W. W. C.

GO AND TAY THEM.—Those delightfully easy, handsome suits of clothes which Lowenberg is now getting up. No one in this section of the State can approach him in this kind of business. His prices are as moderate as the market will allow whilst the good qualities of his workmanship—beauty, durability and comfort—will certainly ensure satisfaction to the purchaser.

Is Packer Loyal?

THIS question agitates the bosoms of a number of our Radical friends. We believe he was not a Brigadier, nor a Pay Master, nor a Sutler, nor a shoddy contractor. But the following extract from the Carbon Democrat proves that Asa Packer rendered far more efficient service to the Government in its hour of need than thousands of loud-mouthed, stay-at-home loyalists:

"On Sunday afternoon, June 28, 1863, a spontaneous, enthusiastic and large gathering of the people of Mauch Chunk was held in the Court House at that place. A fierce, bloody, bitter, uncertain conflict was raging at Gettysburg, from which came hourly dispatches telling tales of horror and of the butchery of noble men. The gathering we speak of was very naturally converted into a war meeting, and patriotic and tender and tearful speeches were made by many citizens of the place. Every soul seemed full of the agony of suspense, trembling lest the sun should go down upon a defeated Federal Army, and the cause of the Union be irrecoverably lost. Urgent appeals were made to the young men to go to the aid of their fellows, and help in the nation's extremity. The morning and the meridian of that day were dark and foreboding. From the Capital to the extremity of telegraphic communication, one dread, terrible fear seized hold of the people lest the great battle of the war should result against us. At the meeting in question, amid all the efforts of burning eloquence and the tears of sympathetic and patriotic women—not a man moved! At length there arose in the audience a man of mature years with gray head, and a bearing as of one of Nature's own noblemen—a man who never made speeches. All eyes were bent upon him, and amid perfect silence he said: "Every man, now in the employ of the Lehigh Valley Rail Road Company, who will volunteer for his country in this her hour of pressing need, shall receive his regular monthly pay and retain his situation until his return, as if he were present and working each day." The effect was most wonderful. Over a hundred men volunteered at once, and in a few hours were fully equipped and speeding over the Lehigh Valley Rail Road to the scene of war, Need we say, that man was ASA PACKER.

"Let Us Have Peace."

THE Radical politicians, seeing the dangerous position in which they have been placed, are doing all in their power to heal their party divisions. Geary long ago despaired of the active support of the Curtin wing of the party, but Cameron before giving him full aid and comfort demands a few more victims, as the annexed letter will show:

CONTINENTAL HOTEL, July 30, 1869.
Hon. Benjamin H. Brewster:

After consultation with our political associates, who are anxious for the election of our mutual friend, I am satisfied that your resignation as Attorney General will go a long way to heal existing dissensions. I write thus frankly to you because I know you desire to secure that result. The conclusion has not been arrived at hastily, but has been authorized by the Governor himself.

Yours truly,
JOHN COVODE,
Chairman State Central Committee.

Now there is no allegation that Brewster is unfit for the position, or that the public service would be benefited by his removal. It is a manœuver of Cameron to get rid of an enemy. But Brewster has resolved to "stick" and no impeachment lash or tenure of office bill can compel his removal. Of course he will not love Geary much after this childish attempt to get rid of him.

New Columbus Correspondence.

MR. EDITOR.

Our usually quiet town, (excuse me Borough) promises for the ensuing three weeks to be in a ferment of excitement. On Thursday the 12th inst., a Camp-Meeting commences in "Bender's Sugar Camp," on Fishingcreek, about four and a half miles from our Borough, and on Wednesday the 25th inst., the Pennsylvania Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church convenes in New Columbus. On the same day the M. E. Camp Meeting in Huntington commences. We expect to see a great many strangers temporarily sojourning among us. Let them come, for our worthy townsman Hon. John Keons has a large and commodious Hotel and will entertain all who favor him with their patronage in first-rate style. Why is it that the editor of the Republican in mentioning the different places of entertainment for visitors to the Camp Meeting, omitted the New Columbus Hotel? He cerianly must have forgotten to do so. So we say to all who visit our Borough and need accomodations to give the Judge a call.

The Academy is now looking up, and promises to open the ensuing term, which commences on Monday August 30th with a large number of students.

We regret to say that the New Columbus Grave Yard is still neglected, being fenceless, and consequently exposed to Cattle, Hogs &c.

Joseph Shiveley and Myron Fellows Esqs., are making considerable improvements in their residences, by enlarging and otherwise beautifying it. Upon the whole our borough is a desirable place of residence, being characterized by the health, morality and hospitality of its citizens. More Anon.

DENIZEN.

A BOY LIFTED BY A KITE.—A young lad at Lake Station, Mississippi, had a very large and beautiful kite presented to him, about six feet by four in size, which he attempted to raise on the 2nd instant, just as the wind was increasing and a storm was threatening. The wind drew the kite so heavily as to drag the boy along also. To prevent losing the favorite, he wound the cord around his body. At last the gust bore kite and boy along in the rapid air current. The boy seemed to be about 100 feet above the earth, and the kite five times that distance. At last the young kite-flyer caught in the top of a tree, and was suspended 75 feet above the ground. A flood of rain came on, slacking the line, abating the wind, and allowing the little sufferer to be rescued. He was found to be unconscious, and so bruised and marred as to be scarcely recognized, but was restored the same evening, and is now doing well.

The public debt statement shows a reduction of the government indebtedness during the month of July amounting to $7,435,744,29. The amount of coin in the Treasury is $66,405,770,92; coin certificates, $36,725,840. Amount of currency in the Treasury $23,381,651,29; sinking fund $11,922,147.07; other bonds purchased, $15,110,500.

THE School Board of Bloom Township have resolved to erect a suitable building for school purposes on their lot in East Bloomsburg. There is every disposition to secure the best teachers that can be had for our schools.

CHARLES H. LOOMIS, a quite intelligent colored man, who hails originally from Fredericksburg, Virginia, and who has been acting in the capacity of barber to President Grant, has been appointed to a clerkship in the Third Auditor's office.—Press.

We presume that this appointment was made in consequence of gratuitous shaving, hair-cutting, &c. by the said colored barber. We would suggest to ambitious office seekers that if they desire to place themselves in the line of promotion, they should apply for the vacant barbership.

SOME of our cotemporaries are in much distress because Asa Packer after a long life of labor has acquired some wealth. Does this disqualify him from office? Would our opponents vote for him if he was as poor as he is rich? Certainly not. His wealth was gained by honest labor, and is being expended for the public good. It is an assurance that unlike the Radical office holders he will not use his position for the purpose of gaining wealth.

But since when did the Radicals acquire such a holy horror of wealthy men? Was it when Alex. T. Stewart, worth about $100,000,000 was made Secretary of the Treasury, and when Borie, one of Philadelphia's millionaires, was made Secretary of the Navy. Or was it when U. S. Mercur, one of the wealthiest men in this Congressional district, was placed in nomination a third time for Congress, contrary to usage?

We pause for an answer.

WE are informed that a certain candidate for the Treasury gave $500 towards the purchase of the old Democrat and Star with the understanding that it should be returned to him in the shape of a fat nomination.—Republican.

This, of course, is an unvarnished falsehood made to order. But it gives us an opportunity of making a statement that may not be uncalled for. We purchased the Star & Democrat for the purpose of healing an old contention in our party. We desired to see a paper published here which would take and maintain an entirely neutral position as to the different candidates. We have done this. The purchase was made without Mr. Buckalew's knowledge, and neither he nor any other person gave or loaned us a dollar in the transaction. The sale was a regular business one, and no pledge of future support was demanded or given to or by Mr. Jacoby, or any of his friends.

The COLUMBIAN is owned by us alone, and we alone are responsible for its conduct and utterances While we maintain the right to our private opinion in reference to candidates, the same as every other Democrat enjoys, the paper while we control it shall never be employed in the interest of any man or clique. It aspires to be the organ of the entire party.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY!

CAMPILLION CARPET!

A new, cheap durable, healthy, and B

FLOOR COVERING!

A substitute for oil-cloth at one-third the cost.

This carpet is produced by a peculiar combination of strong, heavy paper, printed in ornamental colors, and coated with tough, elastic, water proof material which prevents the water, prevents the colors and paper endures washing, and renders the carpet bright and beautiful in the extreme. Its advantages are as follows:—

Its cost renders it available to all classes; it is exceedingly smooth and glossy, and it accumulates next to no dust; it does not require to be taken up and cleaned like other carpet, and thus saves much labor and trouble; by pasting (with the Campillion Enamel occasionally as the case may require, (which costs but a trifle,) it will last indefinitely, even as age and always appear new and bright; it has no odiance whatever is placed upon the paper for wear, but exclusively upon the water-proof coating, the figured paper being used only to secure the colors. Paper has recently been used for a variety of purposes, even for trunks, roofs, flour bags and wearing apparel, but the first attempt, either in Europe or America, to convert it into a carpet of floor covering, all concede it to be an entire success!

We have purchased the right for columbia county and can furnish the carpet to merchants at manufacturers prices.

THE YOUNG FOLKS.

Master Snip.

It was a fine summer morning when Master Snip the tailor, who was a very little man, bound his girdle round his body, cocked his hat, took up his walking stick, and looked about his house, to see if there was anything good that he could take with him on his journey into the wide world. He could only find a cheese; but that was better than nothing, so he took it off the shelf; and as he went out the old hen met him at the door, so he packed her too into his wallet with the cheese.

Then off he set, and as he climbed a high hill he saw a giant sitting on the top, picking his teeth with the kitchen poker. "Good day, comrade," said Snip; "there you sit at your ease like a gentleman, looking the wide world over: I have a mind to go and try my luck in that same world. What do you say to going with me?" Then the giant looked down, turned up his nose at him, and said, "You are a poor trumpery little knave!" "That may be," said the tailor; "but we shall see by and by who is the best man of the two."

The giant, finding the little man so bold, began to be somewhat more respectful, and said, "Very well, we shall soon see who is to be master." So he took up a large stone into his hand, and squeezed it till water dropped from it. "Do that," said he, "if you have a mind to be thought a strong man." "Is that all?" said the tailor; "I will soon do as much;" so he put his hand into his wallet, pulled out of it the cheese (which was rather new), and squeezed it till the whey ran out. "What do you say now, Mr. Giant? my squeeze was a better one than yours." Then the giant, not seeing that it was only a cheese, did not know what to say for himself, though he could hardly believe his eyes. At last he took up a stone, and threw it up so high that it went almost out of sight "Now then, little pigmy, do that if you can." "Very good," said the other; "your throw was not a very bad one, but after all your stone fell to the ground; I will throw something that shall not fall at all." "That you can't do," said the giant. But the tailor took his old hen out of the wallet, and threw her up in the air; and she, pleased enough to be set free, flew away out of sight. "Now, comrade," said he, "what do you say to that?" "I say you are a clever hand," said the giant; "but we will now try how you can work."

Then he led him into a wood, where a fine oak tree lay felled. "Come let us drag it out of the wood together." "Oh, very well," said Snip; "do you take hold of the trunk, and I will carry all the top and the branches, which are much the largest and heaviest." So the giant took the trunk and laid it on his shoulder; but the cunning little rogue, instead of carrying any thing, sprang up and sat himself at his ease among the branches, and so let the giant carry stem, branches, and tailor into the bargain. All the way they went he made merry, and whistled and sang his song, as if carrying the tree were mere sport; while the giant, after he had borne it a good way, could carry it no longer, and said, "I must let it fall." Then the tailor sprang down, and held the tree as if he were carrying it, saying. "What a shame that such a big lout as you cannot carry a tree like this!"

On they went together, till they came to a tall cherry-tree; The giant took hold of the top stem, and bent it down, to pluck the ripest fruit, and when he had done gave it over to his friend, that he too might eat. But the little man was so weak that he could not hold the tree down, and up he went with it, dangling in the air like a scarecrow. "Holla!" said the giant, "what now? can't you hold that twig?" "To be sure I could," said the other; "but don't you see that sportsman, who is going to shoot into the bush where we stood? I took a jump over the tree to be out of his way; you had better do the same." The giant tried to follow, but the tree was far too high to jump over, and he only stuck fast in the branches, for the tailor to laugh at him. "Well, you are a fine fellow after all," said the giant; "so come home and sleep with me and a friend of mine in the mountains to night, we will give you a hot supper and a good bed."

The tailor had no business upon his hands, so he did as he was bid, and the giant gave him a good supper and a bed to sleep upon; but the tailor was too cunning to lie down upon the bed, and crept slily into a corner, and there slept soundly. When midnight came the giant stepped softly in with his iron walking stick, and gave such a stroke upon the bed, where he thought his guest was lying, that he said to himself "It's all up now with that grasshopper; I shall have no more of his tricks."

In the morning the giants went off into the woods and quite forgot Snip, till all on a sudden they met him trudging along, whistling a merry tune; and so frightened were they at the sight, that they both ran away as fast as they could.

Then on went the little tailor, following his spuddy nose, till at last he reached the king's court; and then he began to brag very loud of his mighty deeds, saying he was come to serve the king. To try him, they told him that the two giants, who lived in a part of the kingdom a long way off, were become the dread of the whole land; for they had begun to rob, plunder, and ravage all about them, and that if he was so great a man as he said, he should have a hundred soldiers, and should set out to fight these giants; and that if he beat them he should have half the kingdom. "With all my heart!" said he; "but as for your hundred soldiers, I believe I shall do as well without them."

However they set off together, till they came to a wood. "Wait here, my friends," said he to the soldiers. "I will soon give a good account of these giants;" and on he went, casting his sharp little eyes, here, there and everywhere around him. After a while he spied them both lying under a tree, and snoring away, till the very bough whistled with the breeze. "The game's won for a ducat!" said the little man, as he filled his wallet with stones, and climbed up into the tree under which they lay.

As soon as he was safely up, he threw one stone after another at the nearest giant, till at last he woke up in a rage, and shook his companion, crying out, "What did you strike me for?" "Nonsense, you are dreaming," said the other; "I did not strike you." Then both lay down to sleep again, and the tailor threw a stone at the second giant, that hit him on the tip of his nose. Up he sprang, and cried, "What are you about? you struck me." "I did not," said the other; and on they wrangled for a while till, as both were tired, they made up the matter and fell asleep again.

FARMER'S COLUMN.

USEFUL HINTS.—Put a few live fish into wells, if angle worms infest them.

Toads are capital helpers in taking care of vine patches.

New milch cows should be carded daily. They like it, and it pays.

Rich milk is not the best for calves. A butter cow is not a good stock cow.

Insects do not infest very late sown peas as they do early ones.

Stewed pumpkin as a poultice has been found of great value in reducing inflammatory rheumatism.

The potato is a great absorber of potash. Therefore wood ashes are a good manure for it.

Experiments seem to prove that fence posts set up the reverse way from which they grew, will last much longer.

Calcined plaster is as good a fertilizer as the uncalcined, but it is usually wasted after its use in the arts.

Some one says if salt is kept before a horse in the stable, he will not gnaw his manger. Trial will tell.

Root crops, not grain, are the things for young orchards. They do not steal so much tree food.

Look out for morals as well as muscles in hiring farm hands. They may ruin the boys by their vicious examples

Smoke from rags, dry wood or corn cobs is better than from tobacco in pacifying bees to remove honey, etc.

Carrots are recommended for horses to aid digestion, and tomatoes for cows to improve and increase the milk.

Mangers should be low, and stables well ventilated and well lighted. Many horses are made blind by being kept in the dark.

It is difficult to tell colic from bots in a horse, but a tablespoonful of chloroform, in twice as much mucilage, is a good remedy for either.

If the roots of trees are dipped into water just before planting, the earth that sticks to them will give immediate support to the small fibers.

John Johnson says that farmers must give special attention to sheep and cattle keeping if they want to make grain growing more profitable.

Nine-tenths of the diseases which happen to the hoofs and ankles of the horse are occasioned by standing on the dry plank floors of the stable.

Shoots will push on old and young trees just where the limbs are not wanted. Remember that the new tender shoot will soon be a hard, woody branch. A slight rub will now remove it, but if left a year the knife must be used. Rub off these shoots when young and save cutting hereafter.

Cultivation in the orchard has a two-fold effect—it destroys the weeds, and leaves the surface in that light, mellow condition which enables it to answer the purpose of a mulch. Young orchards, with crops between the rows, should be cultivated with as much an eye to the trees as to the crops.

TEAMS FOR THE FARM.—The question is occasionally raised as to whether horses or oxen are the most valuable for farm labor, but like the one about "Billy Patterson," it remains an open one for the very good reason that it admits of no exact solution. For some kinds of work on the farm, horses may be best for others, oxen. In either case much will depend on the fact whether or not the animals are properly trained or broken to the work required. As a general thing a span of horses will plow over more ground in a day than a yoke of oxen, because they walk faster, yet occasional exceptions to this occur. We remember to have aided in turning over a fallow of 25 acres in which a span of horses, and a yoke of oxen were employed. It was decided to test their relative capacity for the work—both teams being allowed their natural gait. Equal sections of land were assigned to both teams, and the oxen came out invariable a little ahead—gaining time at each turning at the corners. They were then tried on the same lands for a day, with no marked advantage on either side. These oxen were broke to the work; held their heads well up and marched along with a steady, stately step. In this particular instance the oxen were better for plowing than the horses, for the simple reason that performing equal work, they cost less for keeping, and were more readily prepared for labor.

When the field of operations is at any considerable distance from the barn or pasture, the horse would have the advantage in it. As a general thing, the summer season through, horses can do more work than oxen for this reason, they can stand the heat better. Both are important on a considerable farm, and if the ox is found to be worth the most when age suspends labor, the horse will make up the difference by the celerity of his movements, and the more diversified uses for which his labor has been made available. Both are good in their places and no extensive farmer is properly equipped for business who is destitute of either.—Rural New Yorker.

APPLES.—There is scarcely an article of vegetation more widely useful and more universally loved than the appel. Why every farmer in the nation has not an apple tree orchard where the trees grow at all is one of the mysteries. Let every family lay in two to ten or more barrels and it will be to them the most economical investment in the culinaries. A raw mellow apple is digested in an hour and a half; while boiled cabbage requires five hours. The most healthful dessert which can be placed on the table is a baked apple. If taken freely at breakfast with coarse bread and butter, without meat or fish of any kind, it has an admirable effect on the general system, often removing constipation, correcting accidities, and cooling off feeble conditions more effectually than the most approved medicines. If families could be induced to substitute the apple, sound, ripe, and luscious for the pie, cakes, candies, and other sweetmeats with which their children are too often indiscreetly stuffed, there would be a diminution in the sum total of doctor's bills in a single year sufficient to lay in a stock of this delicious fruit for a whole season's use.

This INFALLIBLE REMEDY does not, like the poisonous irritating snuffs and strong caustic solutions with which the people have long been humbugged, simply palliate for a short time, or drive the disease to the Lungs as there is danger of doing in the use of such nostrums, but it produces perfect and permanent cures of the worst cases of chronic catarrh, as thousands can testify. "Cold in the Head" is cured with a few applications. Catarrhal Headache is relieved and cured as if by magic. It removes offensive breath, loss or impairment of the sense or taste, smell or hearing, watering or weak eyes, and impaired memory, when caused by the violence of catarrh, as they all frequently are. I offer in good faith a standing reward of $500 for a case of catarrh that I cannot cure.

FOR SALE BY MOST DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE.

PRICE ONLY 50 CENTS.

Ask your Druggist for the REMEDY; but if he has not yet got it on sale, don't be put off by accepting any miserable worse than worthless substitute, but enclose sixty cents to me, and the Remedy will be sent you post paid. Great Shoshonees Remedy!

OF THE CELEBRATED INDIAN

of the distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, Columbia Territory is now for sale in the Union.

This all pervading great remedy, is warranted and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say, may be relied upon to make a permanent cure of all diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, etc., As well as scrofula, Tetters skin diseases, Humors, and all impurity of the blood excepting the third stage of Consumption.

In Canada where this great remedy has been in use for a short time it has indeed effected some of the most marvelous cures ever recorded in the annals of historical medicine. Such being the case in addition to its former renown in Columbia Territory we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this Great Shoshonees Remedy is the remedy of remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

Price of the Remedy in large pints, $1.25.

Manufactured by Dr. Young & Bros., at Syracuse, N. Y.

For sale by all dealers in Medicine.

(ABSTRACTS OF LETTERS.)

Geneva, N. Y., Feb. 13th, 1869.

DR. YOUNG & BRO.—I find my sales of your valuable Remedies greatly increasing. In fact your Great Shoshonees Remedy is giving the best of satisfaction, and doing just as it is recommended to do, several having even come in to tell me how much they had been benefited from its use. I have sold out of it again, etc. etc.

WILLARD N. SMITH.

Sherman, N. Y., March, 29th, 1869.

DR. YOUNG & BRO.—I started your Great Shoshonees Remedy by giving away one bottle to a confirmed Dyspeptic, the result has been ample. It gives universal satisfaction, more than any other medicine we have had in the store for years. From what I have seen of the Shoshonees, I feel justified in recommending it. Send me six dozen more, it will sell in three months, etc.

Especially the ladies, being truly the ladies' friend, working much lighter and easier than the old tree) ump. They don't make such a slop and don't collect so much ice around the floor in the winter, the water not running so long after pumping. Having taken the first premium at every fair they have been exhibited; also recommended by all insurance Companies, on account of getting out more water in less time and with less labor. Any throwing a barrel of water a minute. All we ask is a trial, and we are confident we can please you.

Again: It is more simple, it having no lower box packed with tow and tallow, which is the greatest trouble in the tree pump. Another great advantage is, that when you get a new pump you are not compelled to drink for a whole year

PITCH PINE OR BLACK OAK WATER.

Our pump being made of wild cucumber wood, which is free from taste, also lasts longer in water. It has also many other advantages, which can only be found out by using them. They have been in use in the northern part of the State for twenty years; selling rapidly everywhere.

DRUGS & MEDICINES.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to subdue more formidable diseases and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a prevention against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where this disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in nowise injures any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicine. One pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Ayer's

Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied, and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.
